INDIANA'S BUILDING A HAVEN FOR HOOSIERS

Gov. Durbin Returns from St. Louis and Is Pleased with State's Building.

PROUD OF CULVER CADETS

Governor and Mrs. Durbin, Colonel Oran Perry, Adjutant General and Mrs. John R. Ward and Colonel and Mrs. George B. Lockwood returned early yesterday morning Louis, where they attended the The Governor was well pleased with the

"Indiana people have every reason to be their building and of their exfibits at the fair," said the Governor last evening. "The building, while perhaps not pretentious as those of a few other States, comes nearer to being what a State illding should be than that of any other State. It is spacious, artistically arranged and furnished and home-like-in fact, it is just the sort of place Indiana visitors to the exposition, and there will be thousands of them, will want to go for an hour's rest, when weary of sight-seeing, and then they'll want to spend the remainder of the day there. President Francis and several other of the exposition officials were profuse in their compliments on the building and were especially pleased with the decorations and arrangements for our exer-

"Another source of gratification to me was the exceptionally fine showing made by the cadets of Culver Military Academy. They clearly outclassed all other cadets there, save those from West Point, and in many respects they compared favorably with the West Pointers. MINISTER SAYS BIBLE AND CHRISTIAN BELIEF NOT SOURCE OF LIBERTY

Rev. Newbert Follows Sermon Evoked by Pu Lun's Visit with Another Equally Startling.

AMPLIFIES SAME THEME

Says Religion, Apart from Civilization, Has Not Helped the Race to Advance.

Following a sermon of the preceding Sunday that was startlingly frank and replete with surprising and revolutionary statements-from the viewpoint of orthodox Christianity-the Rev. E. E. Newbert, of All Souls' Unitarian Church, "yesterday preached to his morning congregation on the theme of "Civilization and Christian-

The first sermon created much discussion and varied comment, and was called forth by one or two incidents of the visit of Prince Pu Lun to Indianapolis. It was directed to the point that China and other lands of the Orient need Christianity and the Bible not so much as they need a rerival of learning and a revolution in their wn culture and rengions. Yesterday's sermon by the Rev. Newbert was a sequel to the first, and was practically an amplification of the thought of its predecessor. Rev Newbert spoke in part as follows:

"Progress is a fact. Its compelling cause is intelligence. Religion, considered apart from civilization, has not helped the race to advance. Religion as an end in itself is sure to mean bigotry and fanaticism. As a thing by itself religion has been a heavy ary, 1902, he was elected to the first presiload for the world to carry. In the distant centuries India came under the curse, and her civilization was arrested by religion. All Mohammedan lands have been blighted by the same curse. Too much religion has been the disease that has sapped

"Nor is this alone true of the great ethnic faiths. Turn to the Middle Ages. The Christian religion took a like course for centuries religion was tried, with no man to question, and how great the failure! Change was impossible. Progress was not desired. Learning was under the ban. The scholar was hunted. Huss and Bruno were burned. The new astronomy was proscribed. The printing press was condemned. The worst part of the nightmare came to an end in the reformation. And the cause of the reformation was the revival of learning, the rise of the humanists and the discovery of the classics, which had been lost "We talk of Christianizing the world. Just what do we mean? Do we hope to save the heathen by giving him the Bible and the Christian belief? Would a simple swapping of religions benefit Asia? Or does Asia need something else? We are slow to admit the influence of race upon religion. When we say that all things great and good come from Christianity we speak as Anglo-Saxons, trained in the school of the Anglo-Saxon civilization. I say no hurt of the Bible and the Christian belief when I say that these are not the source of civil and religious liberty Freedom, the dignity of woman, the pub ic school and the humanities bear the mark of the Anglo-Saxon. "In the distant centuries before Rome built up her iron despotism, the rough Teuton cherished an unusual affection and respect for woman, whom he made his ompanion rather than his slave. In the language of a historian, 'he endowed her in her own right, made her the animating spirit of his home, allowed her to share his enterprises and invested her sex with something of a sacred and prescient character. In his wild poems and rough laws one finds the germ of his later Shakspeares and Beethovens and Cromwells-the germ of that genius which has made his literature the richest in the world and kept his sons for 1,000 years on every throne of Eu-

"In England Magna Charta is the enduring monument to the Anglo-Saxon's fitness for leadership. Did Magna Charta come from the Bible or from the Christian religion? No. Back of it is the Saxon's love of freedom. Spain was Christian at the time, but Spain has no Magna Charta. France was Christian, but Louis XI granted no charter of liberties. Russia was Christian, but Peter the Great gave no pledge for the security of civil liberty.
"In America and England education and civil and religious liberty go hand in hand with Christianity, so that we cannot think of the one without the other. Spain is Christian; Spain, too, is illiterate. She has discovered more lands, misgoverned more people, erected more crosses and murdered more men than any nation in history. Is religion Spain's need? South America is Christian in belief. But how great her ethical need! Cuba and Porto Rico are Christian, yet these islands, lying centiguous to our shores, are poor in moral ideal. Servia, her hands red with the blood of a murdered king and queen, is Christian. Abyssinia has been Christian since the fourth century. Russia is Christian. Have these countries a civilization to boast Freedom in Russia exists only in the dreams of some exile, while in church and state there is the iron despotism. Russia is Christian and cruel. Her masses are no better than slaves, poorly fed and clothed, fought out on the floor of the convention, aside and settled down for a long continued their homes hovels.

"Shall the Christian missionary be our answer to the need of eastern Europe and ligion; they need the higher civilization. Let Russia build for hope upon her universities, so long feared. Let her people pass from bondage and ignorance to freedom and intelligence. "And so of great and disrupted China. China needs to be freed from herself. Religion arrested her development, nor would she gain by swapping it for another, alien to her soil and climate and unsuited to her temperament. China will be saved when she has a mind to go out to meet the world in commerce and the arts of civilized life. She is starting for freedom and progress when she decides to send her picked youths into the universities of western Europe and America. She needs to break with Confucianism, but she does not need to adopt another faith. "I believe in man, and hts capacity fo progress. It would be well could the world fall asleep and forget many religious ideas, while dreaming the dream of the beautiful fife, and awaking to find the dream a reality. The ecclesiastical age is passing. Religious dogma will not again rule the world. Men are turning to life, desiring freedom, prosperity and happiness.'

Horse Frightens at Machine and Drivers Hurl Shower of Stones at Automobilists.

ANDREW TRIED INJURED

Andrew Tried, 3304 North Capitol avenue, a passenger in an automobile driven by Harry and Ben Raphael, of 1919 North Illinois street, was assaulted yesterday afternoon on East Washington street by Tom and Frank Askins, farmers, who were enraged because the machine frightened a horse which they were driving.

The automobile was bound east, and had crossed the Belt Railroad when the meetng with the two Askins occurred. Th the Belt on East Tenth street, and were driving to this city. Their horse took fright, and Harry Raphael, noticing this, slowed up the machine, finally bringing i to a standstill. The farmers were very angry, and, it is alleged without allowin the automobilists to offer any apology began to throw stones. Tried was struck ill in the face by one of the missiles and as rendered almost unconscious. close to one of the farmers, was again struck in the head and painfully injured

The men abandoned their machine under the shower of stones, and started to close in with their antagonists. Tried, when The three men were able to overpower the farmer who was most active in the assault, and threw him to the ground. They then jumped into their car, and hurried down town, where Tried was placed under the care of a physician. The automobilists state that the assault was entirely unprovoked. They claimed the farmers re-marked: "All these fellows who run these autos ought to be killed." The matter was reported to the police.
